Re: Propositions 55 and 56 on March 2, 2004 State Ballot

As part of their ongoing education efforts for local districts, the boards of the California Community College Trustees (CCCT) and Chief Executive Officers of the California Community Colleges (CEOCCC) review each initiative to determine those which affect community colleges. The propositions are forwarded to the colleges with a recommendation that local boards review them, consider their impacts and share that information with local faculty, staff and students.

At their recent meeting, the CCCT and CEOCCC boards reviewed the attached analysis of the propositions that will appear on the March 2, 2004 Primary Election Ballot. Both boards voted unanimously to support Propositions 55 and 56.

Proposition 55 allows the state to issue $12.3 billion of general obligation bonds for construction of K-University school facilities. For community colleges, $920 million would be allocated for new construction, related infrastructure, upgrades and to purchase equipment to be used in these buildings. Virtually all funds previously authorized by the voters have already been committed to specific projects. (Depending on the outcome of debate regarding Governor Schwarzenegger's proposed $15 billion bond measure, this education bond may be removed from the ballot. If that occurs, it would automatically be added to the November 2004 General Election ballot.)

Proposition 56 would amend both the State’s Constitution and statutes to change the state budget process. Its major provisions would include the following:

- Permit the Legislature to enact budget-related taxes and spending with 55 percent vote rather than the two-thirds vote currently required;
- Require 25 percent of “excess” state revenue (up to five percent of General Fund spending) to be set aside and used only in certain circumstances;
- Require that the Legislature and Governor lose salary and expenses each day the budget is late and require the Legislature to stay in session until the budget is passed; and
- Prohibit a legislator from punishing or threatening to punish another legislator for a budget-related vote.

The CCCT and CEOCCC boards urge you to review the attached document summarizing the initiatives, consider their impacts on your college and district carefully, review the resolutions and amend them to fit your local community, and share the information with faculty, staff, students, and your community.
March 2004 Initiatives Ballot

Two initiative constitutional amendments and statutes have qualified for inclusion on the March 2, 2004 Primary Election Ballot. Following is a brief summary, the positions of other educational or civic organizations, and an assessment of the direct and/or indirect effects of each on community colleges.

The CEOCCC and CCCT boards traditionally have taken positions on initiatives that could have a significant impact on community college programs and services. These positions have been shared with the local districts’ leadership to assist them in assessing the initiatives and informing their local communities.

Staff recommends that the boards take “Support” positions on both Proposition 55, The Kindergarten-University Public Education Facilities Bond Act of 2004 and the Proposition 56, the Budget Accountability Act.

Prop 55 - The Kindergarten-University Public Education Facilities Bond Act of 2004

Summary of Key Provisions
This statutory initiative would provide $12.3 billion for public education facilities for kindergarten through the universities. Specifically, the funds are allocated as follows:
- $10 billion for K-12 education facilities;
- $2.3 billion for higher education facilities including:
  - $690 million for UC;
  - $690 million for CSU;
  - $920 million for community colleges.

Fiscal Impact on Community Colleges
AB 16 (Hertzberg (Chapter 33, Statutes of 2002) included a four-year $25.3 billion statewide bond package for public education facilities. This package provided community colleges with $170.5 million from lease-revenue bonds and $746 million in the first two-year general obligation bond (on the November 2002 ballot as Proposition 47, the Kindergarten-University Public Education Facilities Bond Act of 2002), and $920 million in the second two-year bond on the March 2004 ballot. At this time, the total unmet facilities needs for the community college system are estimated at approximately $14.8 billion.

The California Postsecondary Education Commission projects that by 2010, 793,000 new students (often referred to as “Tidal Wave II”) will enter the California Community Colleges, California State University, and the University of California. Of that number, 74 percent will be entering the California Community Colleges, an increase of more than 580,000 students this decade.

Prop 56 – Budget Accountability Act

Summary of Key Provisions
This state constitutional amendment would require a 55 percent (rather than the current two-thirds) vote of the Senate and Assembly to adopt a state budget and related tax legislation and includes incentives for lawmakers to progress with their work. These include: withholding salary and expenses from the Governor and legislators if the budget is not passed and signed by the constitutional deadline; requiring the Legislature to remain in session and not act on other legislation until the budget is adopted, except in response to an emergency declared by the Governor; providing for a “rainy day” reserve fund of five percent to be established in good years to cushion the state from severe cuts in a bad economy; and requiring the state ballot pamphlet that goes to voters at each election to contain a brief summary of how the state spends the money it receives. The measure also calls for investigation and possible censure by the legislative ethics committees if legislators are threatened or punished by party leaders for not voting according to the party line on budget issues.

Arguments in Support
The current two-thirds super majority requirement for adoption of a state budget or related tax legislation has allowed a small minority of legislators to tie up the budget process for increasingly-long periods. Members of the majority, on the other hand, have been able to avoid compromise by pointing to the minority’s ability to stall the process.

California is one of only three states (along with Rhode Island and Arkansas) in which a two-thirds majority is needed to approve a state budget.

The current high threshold is often cited as a primary reason the Legislature has been unable to adopt a budget by its June 15 deadline in recent years. The Legislature has missed this deadline eighteen times in the last 22 years and has begun a new fiscal year without an approved budget nine times over the past thirteen years. These delayed budgets have resulted in hardship and uncertainty for those who rely on them, including community colleges as well as many other public services.

Arguments in Opposition
When a two-thirds vote is required to pass a budget, the burden is on those who support the budget bill to make a strong case for doing so. Reducing the vote threshold results in overriding the rights of the minority party in the Legislature.

This initiative, which should be called the “Blank Check Initiative,” would open the door to uncontested tax increases, one after the other. There would be less accountability, not more, when it comes to raising taxes. Lowering the vote threshold from two-thirds to 55 percent for tax increases would only open the floodgates to higher taxes and more runaway spending.

Impact on Community Colleges

This measure is likely to assure that the state budget is passed by the Legislature by its constitutional deadline of June 15 which will allow community college districts sufficient time to review the state budget and adopt their college budgets in a responsible manner. The recent history of late budgets has resulted in district boards adopting their local budgets without adequate information on the revenues which they can expect, thus creating hardship for students and faculty.
