Participants will:

1) Increase their knowledge of key terms related to race and racism
2) Develop a clear understanding of their own identities as well as the relationship of their identities to the constructs of power, privilege, and subordination
3) Increase their facility at identifying practice-based blindspots – in themselves and in their institutions
4) Better understand the racial-colonial foundations of US higher education – and how to spot everyday institutional racism
ENGAGED HUMILITY
- Strive for intellectual humility. Be willing to grapple with challenging ideas.
- Differentiate between opinion—which everyone has—and informed knowledge, which comes from sustained experience, study, and practice. Hold your opinions lightly and with humility.
- Let go of personal anecdotal evidence and look at broader group-level patterns.
- Notice your own defensive reactions and attempt to use these reactions as entry points for gaining deeper self-knowledge, rather than as a rationale for closing off.
- Recognize how your own social positionality (e.g., race, class, gender, sexuality, ability) informs your perspectives and reactions to your instructor and those whose work you study in the course.
- Differentiate between safety and comfort. Accept discomfort as necessary for social justice growth.
- Keep focused on yourself, What does this mean for me and my life?
- Identify where your learning edge is and push it. For example, whenever you think, I already know this, ask yourself, How can I take this deeper? Or, How am I applying in practice what I already know?
Identify and distinguish between individual and organizational learning

- Where did you get the information necessary to develop your understanding on these topics?
- What sources of information did you use?

- How do you understand (or experience) anti-Black racism?
- How is anti-Black racism similar or dissimilar from racism experienced by other racialized groups?
- How do you differentiate White supremacy from White people?

RACIAL DISPARITIES IN HIGHER EDUCATION
Racial-Colonial Foundations

• Racial-colonial violence is the constitutive underside of the US’s ‘shiny’ achievements.

• Our institutions, as we know them, are results of certain people being "subject to impoverishment, enslavement, colonial removal and occupation, segregation, incarceration, militarization, environmental pollution, and cognitive imperialism." p.80

• Our campuses specifically are sites of struggle because they are laboratories for democracy, built upon hundreds of years of Whiteness-centering practices. Trauma and empowerment.

How to Measure: NACCC Content Areas

- Appraisals of Institutional Commitment
- Racial Learning and Literacy
- Mattering and Affirmation
- Impact of External Environments
- Encounters with Racial Stress
- Cross-Racial Engagement
Everyday Institutional Racism

- Senior leadership is all or majority White (and the only person of color is the CDO)
- Buildings named after racists, eugenicists, White supremacists, slave owners
- The same people of color are asked to serve on every committee
- Art and sculptures across campus reflect Whiteness
- Academic departments hire a faculty member of color and that person is called the “diversity hire”
- When the language of “the right fit” somehow leads to the same or similar type of people being hired….
- Protest policy is different than the regular policies about vandalism or property damage
- Departments don’t invest in anti-racist education and equitable outcomes measurement – until a racial pandemic hits

Key Concepts of Racial Equity on HWIs

- Without racial equity, the benefits of diversity are not realized and institutional excellence is compromised
- We have all been socialized within a racist context
- It is easy to minimize or avoid racism
- White privilege and white fragility undermine anti-racism
- Individuals and institutions must be explicit and intentional in seeking racial equity
- Culture/climate change is essential – not just demographic change
- Ally-building with those from marginalized communities is critical
• Ask questions
• Reflect on yourself to excavate blindspots in practice - EVERYONE has them!
• Examine where those blindspots are intentionally or unintentionally embedded in the everyday fabric of your campus
• Pull that fabric apart, thread by thread
• Read!
• Be in authentic community with those impacted by historic and current forms of marginalization
• DO
• Reflect again…and again
What equity-minded commitments will you make?

How will your commitment show up through concrete actions?
