A MESSAGE TO THE CLASS OF 2026

From SMC Superintendent/President Dr. Kathryn E. Jeffery

To the Graduates of 2026:

You chose to attend Santa Monica College to equip yourself for your future — whether that is a career, a transfer to a four-year institution, or to upskill certain skills to better adapt to a changing world and economy. And today you stand on the threshold of that journey, having completed your selected course of study, ready to move into the world with a Santa Monica College degree or certificate, as evidence of your accomplishment.

With tremendous determination, hope, and endless hours juggling your academics in addition to other life responsibilities, you have proved to yourself and everyone around you that you have what it takes to actualize your hope for the future.

Santa Monica College has always taken great pride in being a beacon of access, inclusion, and excellence — and you are a testimony of that mission. Take the lessons you learned here and apply them toward making this world a better place. The world needs you and your unique contributions. Whatever lies ahead in your journey, I have the utmost confidence in your ability to shine, to create necessary conversations and change.

Remember the friendships you have developed, the pathways traversed, and the doors to opportunity you have opened and will continue to open.

It has been my absolute privilege to be part of your extraordinary journey. May the precious act of learning continue to guide your aspirations, dreams, and hopes toward even brighter tomorrows!

Congratulations on your accomplishments, Class of 2026! Here's to the next chapter!

Kathryn E. Jeffery, Ph.D.
Superintendent/President

GRADUATING STUDENT SPEAKER

Madeline Davis
Learning to Believe

“It was a very long journey to SMC,” says Madeline Davis, who never imagined being a commencement speaker.

Losing her mother to cancer at age 14, right before middle school graduation, led Madeline into a downward spiral of drugs, grief, and depression. She dropped out of school at age 16 and was too scared to go back.

“I never really tried,” she admits, “because if I tried and failed, that would mean I am a failure.”

Instead, she focused on surviving. Newly sober yet overwhelmed by grief, she joined the workforce. Her diligence quickly stood out as she worked at stores that included Zara, Lush, and Bloomingdale’s before earning a promotion to manager at just 18 years old.

“I’ve always been a people person, and I love organizing things,” she says of her rise in retail.

Still, education beckoned, and Madeline took a course at SMC. But a friend’s sudden death from an overdose devastated her, and she withdrew from school to process the loss.

Eventually, therapy and creativity helped her begin rebuilding her life. She attended cosmetology school, discovering a love for hairstyling and self-expression. But chronic health conditions, scoliosis, and injuries from car accidents made the physically demanding career unsustainable.

Facing another crossroads, Madeline reconsidered college. Starting with an English class at SMC, Madeline encountered professors who encouraged her to challenge the mindset that had held her back since childhood. She now realized that intelligence was not fixed at birth, but rather something that could grow through effort and support.

She threw herself into her studies — and surprised herself by earning a 4.0 GPA. Then, inspired by her professors, Madeline considered becoming a teacher herself.

“I know what it’s like to feel like you don’t belong,” she says. “I want to inspire people who don’t believe in themselves.”

Now eight years sober, Madeline credits Alcoholics Anonymous, supportive friends, family, and caring faculty members for helping transform her future. This fall, she will transfer to Emerson College in Boston to study communication. But wherever life and career take her, she still hopes to teach — perhaps even at SMC.

“I want to give what was given to me,” she says.

Jeffrey Berrios Finding His Voice

Jeffrey Berrios arrived at SMC searching for more than a degree.

After graduating from high school during the COVID-19 pandemic, he spent a year trying to navigate college applications and financial aid largely on his own. The son of a Guatemalan immigrant, he lacked the guidance many students take for granted.

At the same time, he was struggling through abuse that left him isolated and uncertain about his future.

At SMC, though, Jeffrey found not only stability and confidence, but also a creative community. He discovered a passion for journalism through The Corsair, SMC's student-run media outlet, and spent two years writing, podcasting, broadcasting, and covering campus and community events.

Known for his incisive pop culture commentaries and multimedia storytelling, Jeffrey earned multiple student journalism awards for his work with The Corsair.

He credits supportive mentors, including English Department Assistant Chair Jessica Krug and Corsair adviser Sharyn Obsatz, for helping him build confidence in himself and his abilities. Just as important were the friendships he formed.

"The sense of community is everything," Jeffrey says. "I found my place here."

This fall, Jeffrey plans to continue studying journalism and media production after being accepted to universities that include the University of Roehampton and University of Westminster in London. He has also applied to USC and Cal State Northridge.

Ultimately, he hopes to work in producing and unscripted entertainment, while continuing to explore podcasting and storytelling. "SMC offered a chance for me to find myself and succeed in a way I never had before," Jeffrey says.

Mia Carreto Chasing Her Interior Dreams

"I love a good challenge," says Mia Carreto. That spirit has defined this first-gen interior architecture student's arc and journey.

She was raised by her single mom — a hard-working Guatemalan immigrant who juggled several jobs at a time. By age 12, Mia was cleaning homes and offices alongside her mother.

She channeled her creative energies into extra income — selling handmade bracelets, beaded crafts, doodle art, and baked goods to neighbors. An honors student at Birmingham Community Charter High School, Mia graduated with a 4.2 GPA while competing on the wrestling team and, as a peer counselor, helping classmates with the college admissions process.

Mia was admitted to nine universities; she chose to enroll in landscape architecture at UC Davis. But three weeks into a summer pre-college bridge program, she knew the rural campus was not the right fit. A friend pointed Mia to SMC's interior architectural design program, where she's thrived ever since. As a commuter student traveling an hour each way, Mia still maintained a 4.0 GPA while continuing to help in the family cleaning business. She was part of the SMC design team that achieved a historic third-place win at a national competition organized by the National Organization of Minority Architects.

This fall, Mia will transfer to Woodbury University — her top choice — to pursue a Bachelor's degree in interior design and a minor in architecture. Her message to fellow Corsairs: Push yourself to do more. [You] can go way beyond what you think is the limit.

Bryan Hartanto Building His Way Up

Bryan Hartanto loves LA freeways — even during rush hour. To this international student, there's poetry in infrastructure.

"It continues to amaze me how engineering is so interwoven in life," says the 20-year-old native of Jakarta, Indonesia.

Bryan grew up in a multigenerational household anchored by his grandfather's construction company. As a boy, he amused himself stacking shoeboxes into skyscrapers and arranging cardboard cities. By age 8, Bryan was accompanying his grandfather on construction jobsites in the Greater Jakarta area.

An excellent student, Bryan attended Penabur International High School and applied to every UC campus in his senior year. To his dismay, he was rejected by all of them. His mother and uncle — who had both gone to Santa Monica College in the nineties and transferred to four-year universities — suggested Bryan follow their path.

Upon arriving at SMC in fall 2023, Bryan threw himself into campus life. Alongside a science-heavy courseload, he held down student jobs in Admissions, the International Education Center, the STEM Program, and the Learning Resource Center — sometimes working at three departments simultaneously. He won a seat on the Associated Students board. Off campus, he participated in a NASA proposal-writing academy, a Caltech mentorship program, and a UC Irvine materials science summer internship. Aside from that, he became an active member of the American Society of Civil Engineers.

This fall, he'll transfer to UC San Diego as a Structural Engineering major and is planning to work with sustainable steel structures in buildings.

Kayjel Mairena On the Frontline

For Kayjel Mairena, journalism is an act of service that puts people first. After serving five years in the U.S. Navy aboard the USS George H.W. Bush as a welder, plumber, and firefighter, Kayjel arrived at Santa Monica College determined to pursue news centered on honesty, empathy, and community. He'd originally volunteered for Navy Public Affairs, but found the office more focused on recruitment than reporting.

At SMC, Kayjel immersed himself in The Corsair, the college's student-run media outlet. After first taking Journalism 1 to strengthen his skills, he joined the staff and steadily developed as a reporter, learning everything from interviewing and multimedia production to protest and community coverage.

His reporting included award-winning coverage of protests against Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) operations in Los Angeles and Minneapolis — experiences that deepened his interest in crisis reporting and photojournalism. Yet some of his most meaningful stories portrayed the grassroots community organizations supporting underserved neighborhoods across Los Angeles.

Faculty and staff across campus played an important role in his journey. Kayjel credits SMC professors with creating an environment where students feel genuinely supported and encouraged to think critically and pursue ambitious goals.

"They made it feel like no matter what I did, anything was possible," he says.

This fall, Kayjel will transfer to the USC Annenberg School for Communication and Journalism to continue studying journalism. He hopes to become a crisis photojournalist covering conflicts, protests, and humanitarian crises around the world.

"I'm just trying to help as many people as I can," he says.
